

V E S E R I U M

We are not DJs. We are the future of music.

Vesperium is an electronic music duo that creates a live show like you've never experienced before. The duo uses virtual reality technology to create sound from thin air using only motions and gestures. Fans experience the music on an entirely different level, being able to see and hear the sounds as they are being created. Using their technology, Vesperium is breathing a human element into EDM and pioneering a distinctly expressive sound filled with aggressive basslines and virtuosic melodies.

Vesperium made their debut this year and has since taken the electronic music scene by storm, amassing an Instagram following of 10,000+ in 5 months, making an appearance in New York City at one of Brooklyn's largest venues (Brooklyn Mirage) to a crowd of over a 1,000, and performing at World's Fair Nano NY (attended by over 5,000 people). The duo has recently relocated to Las Vegas and has made waves across the local scene, playing at the Historic Fifth Street school, the Bunkhouse, First Friday, UNLV, Sahara Lounge, Symphony Park, Millennium Fandom, and Airstream Park.

The duo, who are graduates of Cornell University, have been featured in the Las Vegas Review Journal, The Discovery Channel, Upworthy (500,000 views), NowThis, Business Insider, and FOX28.

Veserium consists of former engineers Ray Li and Michael Ndubuisi who, unsatisfied with available performance technology, decided to create their own. By combining creativity and engineering, they are crafting sounds which have never been heard before, and as a result, re-engineering the DNA of electronic music. Spectrum has won over the hearts of fans around the world who have been hungry for a truly original sound in electronic music.
